Managing employees' payroll hours can be an overwhelming and risky process for most companies and, if not done correctly, can create a huge risk. Automating this process to reduce time, errors, and mitigate the risk associated with incorrectly paying employees is of primary concern. Labor Temps has been on the forefront of this initiative by being one of the first staffing agencies in the Midwest to adopt a Longley Systems Time and Labor Management Solution in the mid 1990's. Labor Temps has remained ahead of the competition by continuously seeking out solutions that take it to the next level.

Phil McMahon, President of Labor Temps, states, "The NOVAtime 4000 Advanced Engine Technology provides for the best user experience, fast deployment, seamless integration, and real-time monitoring. When combined with Labor Temps Managed Services, our clients have the tools necessary to positively impact their human capital."

Labor Temps and Longley Systems have been partners for over a decade, and together they understand the value of providing solutions that take advantage of the latest technology, while exceeding the needs of their clients. By adopting NOVAtime 4000 SaaS Workforce Management hosted solution, Labor Temps will improve upon what it has built by providing a solution that will offer enhanced performance, minimal downtime, and a myriad of functionalities that can be tailored to each of its customer's unique needs.

"Working with Phil for over a decade now, I understand his passion for taking care of his customers and his desire to improve his internal processes and procedures. Including NOVAtime 4000 in his repertoire of offerings to his customer makes perfect sense and justifies his desire and willingness to be a leader in his industry." says David Malnar, President of Longley Systems.
